

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR ONLINE MEDICATION PURCHASES!!!!

On December 10th 2010, during a canine yearly, we performed a routine heartworm screening on one of our patients. Testing came back positive for heartworms! According to our records and confirmation with the owner, they had been purchasing Revolution from an online source. According to the owners, they applied the medication as directed without fail.

Dr Hargett contacted Pfizer, the company that makes the product to report the findings. Since Pfizer backs up their product 100%, we attempted to get Pfizer to help with the significant expense of treating for heartworms. Unfortunately, they will not guarantee any products sold online. According to Pfizer, they do not sell to online pharmacies, and will only back up the product if purchased through a veterinarian. We attempted to contact the online pharmacy, in the hopes that they would back up their product as stated on their website, but the terms and conditions truly prevents anyone from achieving their requirements.

This is one of many examples of what can happen when putting your trust in online pharmacies. We have contacted all of our prescription pharmaceutical manufactures and none of them will back their product, if purchased online. They have stated that they do not distribute to online pharmacies and do not know where these online pharmacies get their products.

Fortunately Dr Hargett and the staff of JCVC are currently treating this pet for heartworm disease and he is doing very well. Unfortunately for the owner, he is having to finance the cost of treatment on his own.

The entire staff at Johns Creek Veterinary Clinic strives to provide the best in veterinary medicine, as well as being a trusted source for all your pet's pharmaceutical needs.
